Nominations now open for the 2022 Commonwealth Bank Teaching Awards

Commonwealth Bank and Schools Plus are calling for students, parents, and communities to nominate teachers or school leaders who have been an inspiration through challenging times.

Tuesday, 8 February 2022

Acknowledging the continuous COVID-19 related disruption to education, this year's Awards will showcase teachers and educators who have made a transformative impact in their students' lives and demonstrated resilience to unique teaching challenges.

Now in its sixth consecutive year, the Awards will recognise more teachers than ever before, with a new category for Early Career Teachers added to the existing 12 Teaching Awards for outstanding established educators.

Twelve educators will win a prestigious Teaching Award valued at $45,000 that goes towards professional development and a strategic school project, and the privilege to join a unique group of education change-makers.

Nathan Barker, Head of Community Investment at Commonwealth Bank, says this year's Awards will help to acknowledge a new cohort of 'pandemic heroes'.
